UCT offers R100 000 reward for arrest and successful prosecution of Rhodes Memorial attacker

The executive of the University of Cape Town has offered a reward of R100 000 for information leading to the arrest and successful prosecution of the perpetrator in the recent attacks in the Rhodes Memorial area. The university is also deploying members of a private security firm to increase patrols in the affected areas in an attempt to increase safety for both students and staff.

This decision was taken today after a campus announcement informing the university community about the latest attack.

Furthermore, the executive will meet with the South African Police Services (SAPS) again as soon as possible, to ensure that UCT supports SAPS in their efforts to arrest the perpetrator and to ensure that we have done, and continue to do, everything we can to help.

Anyone with any information can contact Steven Ganger, Manager: Investigations, Campus Protection Services, on telephone: (021) 650-2222/3 or email: steven.ganger@uct.ac.za
